PATTERSON GIVES HIS SUPPORT TO COLONEL GRAVES

Morgan Candidate Is Pleased With The Voting Result

McDOWELL IS LAST IN RACE

Local Man Forges To Third Place, Carries 13 Counties

Andrew Patterson today took occasion to congratulate the winner of the gubernatorial primary, Colonel Bibb Graves, and to pledge full support to the coming administration.

Mr. Patterson likewise expressed his appreciation to his friend who worked so earnestly in the counties where organization was perfected.

The Morgan gubernatorial candidate, without ample funds to carry on his campaign and with organizations functioning in only a portion of the 67 Alabama counties succeeded in rolling up a tremendous vote which according to unofficial count carried him into third place in first and second choice votes. Charles S. McDowell ran fourth in the primary.

The totals given the four candidates were: Graves 85,580; Carmichael 74,516; Patterson 68,225; McDowell 67,356. (First and second choice totals.)

Patterson was victorious in thirteen counties in the state carrying Baldwin, Cherokee, Clarke, Clay, Cullman, DeKalb, Etowah, Marshall, Morgan, Pickens, Shelby, St. Clair, and Winston. The Morgan candidate was runnup by a close margin in a great many of the remaining counties.

Mr. Patterson's statement to the voters and friends who supported him is given:

"Col Bibb Graves for many years my personal and political friend has won the nomination for governor.

"I extend to him my congratulations and wish for him a successful administration of our state affairs. I shall heartily cooperate with him to make effective those constructive progressive principles and policies which will result in the rapid development of our great state.

"I am deeply grateful to the thousands of loyal and faithful friends throughout the state who so ardently supported my candidacy. I shall ever cherish the memory of these confidence and will endeavor in my private and official life to prove myself worthy of their friendship and support.

"The magnificent vote which I received in the face of serious handicaps is most encouraging to me as I am sure it is to my friends."

Morgan county grand jury went into session today at the Commissioner's court room at the courthouse today with J. I. Chrissinger, Albany man, as foreman. The jury was organized early today by Judge James E. Horton who has just begun a six weeks term of the circuit court.

While a great many witnesses have been called to appear before the grand jury, Morgan county has no outstanding case to hold the attention of the public at this time, the cases of capital nature being few in number.

It is not known how long the body will be in session, nor the extent of the labor before them.

AID OF EX-CHIEF OF DRYS NOW SOUGHT

White May Help Out In The Probe Of Canton Slaying

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 16.—(AP)—Prosecutor B. B. McClintock, of Stark county, today formally requested Attorney General Crampton to appoint James A. White, former state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, as a special assistant in the investigation of the Don R. Mellett Canton slaying.

Joseph Roach, special investigator, declares evidence in his hand involves several members of the Canton police force, in a liquor conspiracy and that at least one police officer is involved in the murder.

The attorney general is in Michigan on a camping trip. His assistant, H. H. Griswold, immediately set out to get in communication with him by telephone, so the Stark county prosecutor may have the approval or disapproval of the appointment of Mr. White today.

Mr. White resigned as Anti-Saloon League superintendent to become a candidate for the republican nomination for governor in 1924. Since his defeat in the primary two years ago, he has been practicing law in Columbus.

FARMERS FROM 2 COUNTIES TO COME HERE ON THURSDAY

One Hundred On List From Limestone And Morgan

Tinkham Demands Anti-Saloon League Be Prosecuted

TWO SPEAKERS ARE EXPECTED

Final Meeting of The Farm Relations To Be The Best

Morgan and Limestone county farmers, numbering 100, have been sent invitations to attend the last meeting of the farm relations committee of the Albany-Decatur Kiwanis club to be held on Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A.

Acceptances are already coming into the committee and it is anticipated that a large percentage of the farmers will be present here for the enjoyable culmination of farm relations meetings.

That committee, under the executive leadership of John Patterson and the chairmanship of Fred S. Hunt, with Charles T. Rountree and J. C. Ford, county farm agent, as committeemen, has planned and sponsored six trips of club members to various Morgan county communities this year, all having been highly successful and greatly increased the good will in the county toward Albany-Decatur.

A singular feature of the farm banquet will be seen in the plan of the club to use only Alabama grown products, falling in line with the "Trade in Alabama" slogan so popular over the state.

Included in the list of speakers for the occasion are: Dr. M. F. Jackson, director of extension department of the T. C. I. at Birmingham and Mr. Lassiter, editor of the Progressive Farmer, published at Birmingham. The latter speaker has not definitely settled upon the local speaking date.

All plans are moving forward to make the meeting the best of the series of farm meetings prepared in recent years and it is believed that the farmers of Limestone and Morgan counties will plan to be present.

The farm relations committee has functioned through the year with the single idea of promoting good will throughout North Alabama sections and in aiding farming interests in any possible way.

Other features of the program for the evening have not yet been announced.

NATIONAL POLITICS WARMING UP EVEN IN TORRID SEASON

Smith Is Loath to Run Again for Governor of N. Y. State

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(AP)—National politics is warming up in the hot weather season.

A demand that the Anti-Saloon League be prosecuted, claims that a satisfactory number of dry candidates won in the primaries, claims that the republicans will lose senate control this year, and a declaration by Governor Smith, of New York, that he is reluctant to wear himself with another term as governor were week-end developments.

Representative George H. Tinkham, republican of Mass., demanded in a letter to Attorney General Sargent, made public in Washington, that the Anti-Saloon League be prosecuted under the corrupt practices act, claiming that "this ecclesiastical, political organization" has "set aside one of the great constitutional guarantees of American freedom and liberty" the separation of church and state.

Mr. Tinkham asks prosecution of the league for failing to report political receipts and expenditures, or for falsely reporting there were none, of League officers for perjury.

On the other hand, "the wets are spending more money, building a stronger organization and spreading more propaganda," in the view of Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the anti-saloon league, in a Washington statement.

Mr. Wheeler declared primary returns from 25 states showed there was no reaction against prohibition. On the contrary, he claimed that 75 per cent of congressmen and 80 per cent of the senators, nominated in states where nomination is tantamount to election, were dry.

The democratic national committee criticizes President Coolidge on the $55,000,000 budget increase for next year, after a $470,886,681 increase this year.

"What price constructive economy?" asks the committee statement.

Senator Gerry, chairman of the democratic national senatorial campaign committee, is sure his party will control the next senate at the next session.

Depression of some eastern industries and a continued slump in the agriculture, south and west, are bringing a reaction against republican lack of leadership, says a statement issued at Providence.

Governor Al Smith, of New York, regards conditions so favorable for his party that he is loath to tax his strength with another term as governor. "Give me a little personal consideration," he said to friends in Buffalo.

Many Cards Are Sent To Captain

MAPS MADE FOR PAVING PROJECTS

East Albany Paving To Jump Values In Property

What is heralded as a forerunner of a real estate movement in the eastern sections of the city of Albany will follow at the completion of plans now in the hands of the city engineer, planning improvements upon Tower avenue, Jackson and Sherman streets, all extending to 18th avenue east from the Somerville roadway.

Marion S. Bingham, city engineer and Herschel McClusky, assistant engineer, are working upon the plans for the projects. Tower avenue will extend 56 feet from curb to curb with a 24 foot parkway in the center. Sherman and Jackson streets will be made 30 feet in width without a parkway.

The city engineer has likewise been instructed to prepare plans for the extension of 5th avenue south, looking toward the paving of that thoroughfare, but it is not yet ascertained the distance of the street, nor the width between curbs.

Improvement of that section of the city, it is predicted by realty men, will increase the buying tendency in those sections.

Publisher Of "Star" Returns

John O. Powell, publisher of the Gadsden Evening Star, has returned to that city, accompanied by his wife and daughter, Miss Elizabeth Powell, after a pleasant visit with Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hatfield. Mr. Powell began the publication of the "Star" several months ago and the growth of that newspaper is evidence of the ability of the publisher.

Nomination By Petitions Soon

Decatur citizens will begin nomination of their candidates for office within a few days. The law provides that candidates for mayor and for the city council shall be nominated by petition of a small number of qualified voters. These petitions must be filed not more than 60 days before the election date nor less than 20 days before such time.

CORROBORATION OF MRS. GIBSON GIVEN BY A NEW WITNESS

Millwright Says He Kept Silent To Shield Girl

STATE SCORES IN TRIAL TODAY

Damaging Evidence Introduced In Noted Hearing

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 16.—(AP)—The testimony of Mrs. Jane Gibson, woman pig raiser, was partially corroborated today at the hearing of Henry Carpenter and Willie Stevens, charged with the murder of Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

Mrs. Gibson testified Friday that she was in DeRussey's lane, near the Phillips farm, saw two men and a woman and heard shots fired. She identified Stevens and Carpenter as the men. The woman, she said, was Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, also charged with the murder.

Mrs. Hall is at liberty on $15,000 bail. Henry F. Sherling, millwright, testified he was in DeRussey's lane the night of September 14, 1922, and saw Mrs. Gibson there on her mule. He saw no one except Mrs. Gibson and heard no shots.

The witness had kept silent for four years to shield a girl who was with him. Charles Albaugh, a taxi driver, testified he saw a sedan parked in Easton avenue, near DeRussey's lane, while he was driving by. He saw two or three persons drive down a bank toward the car, but he did not know whether they were men or women.

William Phillips, night watchman at the New Jersey college for women, told his four year old story of seeing a "woman in grey" enter the Hall residence about 2 a. m. the night of the murder. He is under $2,500 bail as a material witness. He was not permitted to answer a question about detectives employed by Mrs. Hall threatening him if he told of seeing this woman enter.

James Mill, husband of the slain choir singer, took the stand to tell again of his whereabouts on the night of the murder. He told of seeing his wife leaving for her tryst with the rector. As she went out at 7:30 that evening, he said he asked: "Where are you going?"

"Follow me and find out" he quoted her as saying.

Courtland Road In Bad Condition

Decatur-Courtland roadway is still very rough between these cities and Courtland, according to travelers returning from a trip to the latter city. A considerable portion of the highway is under construction, while the portion graded is very difficult to negotiate during wet weather. It is not learned if the state highway commission has let the contract for the two mile project between the Morgan county line and Fish Pond, this action to have taken place immediately after the August primaries.

PARIS.—There will be no more free days for the foreign tourists who wish to visit the museums of Paris on Thursdays and Sundays when admission, up to this time, has been gratuitous to all. Only Frenchmen who can justify their nationality by official papers will be able to enter without paying the usual two-franc fee.

The new rule seems only just inasmuch as tourists are here for only a short time and should pay their quota toward the upkeep of the museum treasures. In spite of the exchange rates, it has been noticed that foreigners were increasingly making use of "free days" for their visits to the Louvre and other museums.

Besides possessing a pair of million-dollar legs, Mistinguett, the celebrated French music-hall star, is said to own the finest silver-service in all France, second only to that of Leon Blum, wealthy Socialist. It is composed of all the knives, forks, spoons, sugar-bowls, creamers, etc., which have been presented to her as souvenirs by all the proprietors of famous restaurants where she has eaten during her rather long life-time and in all countries of the globe. Wherever she takes a meal, "Miss" is certain to be offered a piece of silver from the chef de Maison which she accepts with little ado.

Louis Marquis of Clichy was barred from a swimming competition and in a rage threw himself into the river to prove that he really knew how to swim. He never came up again—that is alive. Crowds on the bridge that had gathered to see the exhibition thought he must be only joking and no one dared to dive in to save him. An hour or so later his dead body was washed ashore.

Death and insanity followed behind a hearse taking the body of a working woman to a cemetery on the outskirts of Prague recently. One of the horses drawing the hearse became frightened and plunged into the mourners. One woman was mortally injured, seven were seriously hurt and several others were slightly injured. A few minutes later the grandmother of the young woman seeing them brought home on a stretcher believed they were dead and suddenly became insane and attempted to throw herself under a street-car.

That "the Czar's Daughter is Not Dead" is being proved in a new sensational novel running in a French serial. This is the title of the story which is said will hold the interest from beginning to end and prove that statement made in the title. The author is a young Frenchman, Pierre Mariel.

Gloire, beauté, amour—Fame, beauty or love—which would you choose if a lovely Fairy made an offer of these fine days? This is the subject of an interesting questionnaire but before the fair readers of the Paris "Intransigent."

In spite of the frivolous reputation of pretty Parisiennes, beauty has not received highest favors, but "To be a beautiful little thing in the arms of a lover, what fame equals that?" asks Myriam Harry, renowned French writer who has recently stirred up the Paris critics with her book on "Cleopatra."

"I do not give such importance to beauty—so fragile and ephemeral," says Rosie of the Dolly Sisters, and since Jenny is always of the same opinion as Rosie that means that they both think love is the only thing that counts and that without it fame is nothing.

Little Cupid comes off with all the honors. Fame and beauty appear desirable only when leading love.

To Pick World's Prize Beauty—What Will the Standard Be?

CHARMING?
This Makoo Queen Is Considered a Raving Beauty by Her Native Friends—Why Isn't She Pretty to Us?

THIS beauty contest business, started not many years ago by Americans, seems to have overstepped all national boundaries.

Not only the United States, but France, England, Australia and other nations everywhere have their pulchritude competitions, and now there are to be international contests at Paris and Atlantic City.

Probably there will be a squabble when the ultimate attempt is made to pick the most beautiful girl in all the world. Ideas of feminine charm vary with geography. The equatorial savage esteems distorted lips and tortured ear lobes. The Oriental thinks there is nothing fairer than yellow skin, slant eyes and deformed feet. In Germany they like ladies of the Brunhilde type, big and strong enough to toss a piano across the Rhine. In Spain and Italy they lean toward black-eyed, slinky señoritas. America (so it is rumored) likes blondes. "Gentlemen prefer blondes."

BOYS AT CAMP HEAR SPEAKERS

Two Counties Gather For Ki-Y Outing Farm Clubs

With approximately 115 boys from Morgan and Cullman counties gathered in session at Ki-Y camp, near Vinemont, prominent speakers of the state were heard during the past week upon the subjects of education, health and farming progress. The camp was held under the supervision of J. C. Ford, county farm agent.

Featuring the camp life was the evening motion picture presented to the boys on subjects in which their interest abounded. Swimming, games and reports on work were other features of the daily and evening sessions.

Inspirational addresses were made by J. C. Lowery, club agent of Auburn, E. L. Hays, superintendent of education Morgan county, Prof. H. G. Dowling, Cullman county, W. C. Blasingame, federal health employe working in this state, and James Speed of the Southern Ruralist.

The camp was in session three days and was an inspiration to the boys engaged in the club work.

Movie Experiment With Parachute May Bring Safety Service for Airplane

An International News Service LOS ANGELES.—A parachute for an entire airplane, the invention of Harry D. Doucett of San Diego, will be tried out here shortly.

The device, calculated to carry gently to earth the entire plane instead of merely saving the life of the pilot, will soon be ready for a test, Jesse L. Lasky, motion picture producer, is backing financially the experiment with the stipulation that, in case the trial is successful, he will be allowed to use the airplane parachute for "Wings" a picture of the part played by the American air forces on the western front. As more than 400 planes will be used for the picture, Lasky hopes the invention will make it possible to film the story without a single casualty.

"We aren't asking for permanent right in Doucett's patents,"

Frank Turner Is Laid To Rest

Frank Turner, who was drowned in Bay, Ark., was laid to rest Sunday in Ripley cemetery, Rev. J. D. Hunter, pastor of the Central Methodist church here conducting the services.

The body of Mr. Turner arrived here Sunday morning at 1:15 o'clock and was conveyed to the residence of B. A. Turner, a brother, on Johnston street. The funeral cortege left the home Sunday afternoon at one o'clock for Ripley.

"TAKES POSITION"
Hodges Crow, who was recently the winner in the race for Tax Collector has accepted a position with Cain, Wolcott and Rankin, returning to his duties today. Mr. Crow devoted his time to his campaign for the tax office position prior to the August primaries.

Lasky explained, "we are only asking the right to use his invention in this picture, if the invention proves successful."

If the test justifies the optimism of aviators who have examined the device, a pilot in a disabled plane can release a parachute attached to the fuselage and sit securely in the cockpit while gliding easily to earth.

CAREY TAKES HIS CASE TO HEYDLER

Deposed Captain Will Lay His Side Before Executive

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Max Carey, deposed captain of the Pittsburgh Pirates, carried his case before John A. Heydler, president of the national league, today after a brief conference with Baseball Commissioner Landis.

Carey arrived here this morning from Pittsburgh to lay before the official the story of events which resulted in his suspension last week along with the conditional release of Babe Adams and Carson Bigbee, as a result of their agitation to oust Fred Clarke, assistant manager, from the Pirates bench.

Carey was informed by Landis that the latter would take no action until the facts had been laid before Heydler.

After a conference it was announced that the matter was placed entirely in the hands of the national league executive. President Heydler will attempt to settle the situation without forcing Commissioner Landis to take action.

The attendant was arrested and admitted that on many journeys he had made in Royal cars over the frontier he had smuggled a half million dollars worth of contraband goods.

CONTEST LOOMS IN COLBERT RACE

Sheriff's Candidates May Ask Review Of The Returns

SHEFFIELD, Ala., Aug. 16.—(AP)—The P. P. Miller faction, dissatisfied at the ousting of their candidate for the next sheriff of Colbert county, will have only until Wednesday to file their charge of fraud before the election commission, after which time no action can be taken.

It was first announced unofficially through a newspaper that Miller was the next democratic candidate for sheriff and nominated by a plurality of eight votes. An official count later showed that J. E. Keeton, his runner-up, was winner by 10 votes.

Legal talent is to be sought in contesting the returns, it is said. Miller enthusiasts may charge that two boxes were tampered with. However no action was taken Monday and it is supposed that the faction will wait until Wednesday, before taking any steps.

TODAY 12 Years Ago

From The Daily of
August 16, 1914.

August 16 falling on Sunday, there was no issue of The Daily of that date.

Three cotton warehouses are being provided for the handling of additional cotton here this season, that is the sure barometer that Albany is recognized as the logical marketing center.

There are a hundred ways to make business, the safest and best is in using the advertising columns of the newspaper, people subscribe for the newspaper in order that they might know what values in merchandise can be bought in the cities.

Albany-Decatur's fair is not far away now, let us give our full support and enjoy the greatest fall season that will undoubtedly result from bringing farm trade into these cities. This is the logical trading center, let's make it so.

Everywhere you look in Albany-Decatur there is building activity. People of these cities realize the future offered here and they are not hesitating in displaying their faith, they are placing their money in real estate and building materials. The future here is greater than at any other point in Alabama.

Proving that the county newspaper reaches the greatest number of county people is the Albany-Decatur Daily, J. C. Ford, county farm agent, came to the Daily Saturday and asked that the news of the cotton danger in this and in Lawrence county might be given to the farmer. The Daily is reaching Morgan county homes and it is safe to say that the one news story about the inroads of the cotton pest saved thousands of dollars to Morgan county and Lawrence county farmers.

Now that the election is over and the newspaper has received any number of compliments upon the service rendered the public, the Daily thinks that the public should know that the reason Limestone county reports came into this office rapidly was due to the foresight and news instinct of D. L. Rosenau, Jr., Athens correspondent. Mr. Rosenau is a young attorney in the Limestone capital, but from the amount of newspaper urge and news intelligence he displayed he certainly should try his hand in the newspaper game.

BANKRUPTCY LAWS NEED CHANGES INDIVIDUALLY.

Sweeping changes in the National Bankruptcy act which was passed by Congress on May 19 and signed by President Coolidge on May 27, becomes effective on August 27, according to the Stylacanga News, which goes on to explain the sweeping alteration with regard to business principle.

Need for the law is explained in a letter from the American Institute of Accounts which says: "Need of a bankruptcy law is universally recognized in view of the large percentage of undertakings that fail because of the unavoidable hazards of business. Business men however, rebelled against the misuse of the law by business crooks, who under the protection of a statute intended to protect the unfortunate, have succeeded in stealing large sums by carefully planned fraudulent bankruptcies and by concealment of assets. These criminals have brought even the law itself into disrepute." That has to do with the bankrupting in the business world, but lays a foundation for the discussion of inadequate facilities of the law in handling the individual who bankrupts at slight opportunity.

Albany-Decatur suffered substantially at the hands of such practice for a good many months after an industrial situation knocked the bottom out of business, lately the practice has been less prevalent, but it has served to bring the law entirely into disrepute with the business men of these cities.

There are a few ways in which the law can be avoided, but most business men, dealing upon the assumption that people are honest, do not take the necessary precaution and sooner or later, at the discretion of the debtor, the creditor gets "stuck." Some merchants in these cities have been careful to follow the case of the individual to who credit has been extended and they have found that the merchandise on other articles of marketing value has been bought with the intention of gaining credit and never paying for the article. Of course the business man is to blame to some extent for allowing credit in cases where absolute knowledge of financial standing was not easily ascertained, but he is not to blame for the dishonesty of man. The recourse of the business man is found in the practice of garnishment, another nuisance to the man who employs labor, bringing about an unhealthy situation between employer and employee. A sweeping change in the bankruptcy law as it applies to the individual undoubtedly would likewise be found needed. So far as it has progressed there seems to be very little good to have emanated from its provisions.

POLITICAL POST MORTEM: PATTERSON WILL TRY AGAIN.

There is very little to be gained by the general public in listening to coroner's juries deciding in what means the murdered met his death, yet it is an ordinary occurrence designed to fix the full penalty in its legal status of absolute correctness. The political game is finished in county and state and there is no use to lose a great amount of time in discussing the various interesting points of the campaign, yet it is pleasant to wade into the heart of things and discover the faults and weaknesses of campaigns of the home man and of his opposition.

Prior to the primary date friends of Mr. McDowell charged that Andrew Patterson had no strength, friends of Mr. Carmichael designed the same methods of advertising, acclaiming McDowell as the man to defeat. Andrew Patterson's support attacked Carmichael while the trio entirely forgot the candidacy of Colonel Bibb Graves, the nominee who was swept to the realization of his ambition upon the tide of the minority strength.

Opposition claimed Mr. Patterson had no strength, yet in the total voting of the state Mr. McDowell is found to be on the last rung of the political ladder, trailing Patterson in first and second choice votes by a total of 869. Patterson stood eight per cent of the total vote back of the winner, Carmichael stood five per cent back of the winner, Colonel Graves. Would that indicate that the candidacy of the local man had been received with any degree of public light-heartedness? Patterson was defeated, it is true, but it was not the force of reaction, nor the force of radicalism that accounted for his loss, the split in progressive force cost him the nomination.

With either Patterson or Carmichael out of the race North Alabama would have acclaimed a governor on the morning of August 11, there would have been no tedious count to ascertain the winner, he writer does not believe that the race would have been close.

Take for an instance the total vote rolled up by Colonel Graves. The nominee received 83,580 first and second choice. Patterson and Carmichael vote stood at 142,247, a figure nearly doubling that of the nominee. Mr. McDowell could not have won for the progressive force would have been centered entirely against his candidacy, even as it was prior to the primary date. Mr. McDowell was beaten from the start, the state had grown tired of Brandonism, had heard and read too many charges of improper administration and whether true or not the masses did not desire to acclaim that administration for another four years to produce a test.

C. M. Stanley, associate editor of the Age-Herald, declares after a thorough summary of the political situation that the defeat of Mr. Patterson was due solely to the entrance of Mr. Carmichael nearly six months after Mr. Patterson had entered the campaign as the chieftain of the progressive legions. Mr. Stanley says: "The 1926 campaign for governor is now a matter of history, and the lessons to be drawn from it are of value to every citizen. Early in the campaign it became evident that certain definite extremes of policy were reflected in the Charles S. McDowell, extreme reactionary support by the Brandon administration on the one hand, and Colonel Bibb Graves, extreme radical on the other. In between these extremes and avowedly a candidate was A. G. Patterson, constructive and progressive. Until the entry of Mr. Carmichael, the progressive forces had their ambitions centered upon Mr. Patterson, who had made a splendid record in behalf of the public interest as president of the Public Service Commission. Patterson was a new man in politics and had been practically drafted from his business in North Alabama to defeat the old reactionary administration of the Public Service Commission headed by Sam P. Kennedy, and bring about a reorganization of that body in the interest of all the people. When A. H. Carmichael entered there was brought another progressive into the race, and quickly it was evidenced that the Carmichael and Patterson forces were dividing the progressive strength against the reactionarism of McDowell and the radicalism of Graves. Mr. Carmichael entered the race on February 23 at a very late hour in the campaign, only 36 days before the closing of the primary entries on April 1. This was almost six months after Mr. Patterson had formally declared himself a candidate for governor on August 21 of last year."

"Immediately after Mr. Carmichael's announcement his friends pictured him as a large and outstanding figure who would at once command great strength because of his political stature, and there was begun a systematic attempt to minimize the campaign of Mr. Patterson, on the ground that he was not a vote-getter or did not measure up to the stature of governor, or had not the background of long legislative experience, possessed by Mr. Carmichael. With all of the building up of the Carmichael myth of strength there was a constant assertion by its exponents that Mr. Patterson had no strength and that the people were not impressed with his campaign sufficiently to justify a concerted support of him."

Mr. Stanley continues to show the relative strength of Mr. Patterson and Mr. Carmichael and reaches the conclusion, based upon the actual counting of votes that Carmichael, with an ample campaign fund, the organized educational body, and a systematic campaign gained but three per cent more of the total vote than did Mr. Patterson whose candidacy was only a popular movement with campaign organizations functioning but in a few counties and with comparatively small expenditures in money. The Age-Herald writer reaches this conclusion: "The result showed that Patterson had the popular strength and would have been an easy victor, but for the complication injected by Carmichael's entry into the contest only 36 days before the closing of the primary entries and six months after Patterson's announcement."

There are any number of moral lessons to be drawn from this now historic split in the forces of progress in Alabama. One might speak of consolidation, co-operation, all for one and one for all, but the writer does not choose to cry over the result as Kipling's artist cried over the ruin of his ideal as pictured in his masterpiece, destroyed by the one whom he called friend. The time will come again for Mr. Patterson, he is a growing power in this state and Montgomery will some day, perhaps at the end of the next four years will greet the progressive as governor of all the people. Mr. Patterson and his backers are not disappointed over the outcome for the Morgan man made a splendid race, conducted on a high plane without vituperation and mud-slinging, characteristic of some other candidacies. The Morgan man has nothing to feel disappointed over, his home people stood with him, Carmichael was forced to split with him even at his next door in Lauderdale county where Patterson came near defeating him. There is nothing to feel disconsolate over, Patterson will try again and the next time he will be the victor, North Alabama has learned its lesson.

PROFESSOR JULIAN HUXLEY, who inherits his love of science, says the male crab holds his brightly colored claw in the air to attract the lady crab's favorable attention.

The male spider will catch a fly and offer it to the female spider, as you have seen a rooster find a worm and let a hen eat it. Sometimes, at the last moment he eats it himself.

The poor male spider is most to be pitied of all husbands. For his wife usually devours him at the end of the honeymoon. The female praying mantis has the same disagreeable habit.

SCIENTISTS tell you that with the air of radium you can transform a yellow diamond worth $100 into a blue white diamond worth $700. If the diamond is bigger, your increased value will be proportionately greater.

Diamonds thus treated have remained blue for four years. Whether they would remain blue forever, science doesn't know.

If "blue white" diamonds were commoner than yellow diamonds, they would be cheaper than the yellow. And if diamonds were as plentiful as glass, women would not want them. Moralize on that.

THE United States government now runs a budget system, or tries to, and President Coolidge has cut ninety-nine million dollars from the preliminary estimate.

According to the present plans, the government, this year, will spend three billion two hundred and seventy million dollars. That is much less than we were spending a while ago, but it is six times the annual expenditure that filled the country with horror in the days of Tom Reed.

War is expensive, especially when you pay the bills for other countries.

ROME assures the United States that Italy's treaty with Spain is not a blow at North America, isn't intended to take South American markets away from the United States, and not intended "to bore into South America."

No explanation or apology is needed if we are foolish enough to keep out of this country immigrants like the Italians, who helped to build it up, we certainly ought not to play a dog-in-the-manger part and try to keep Italians, Spaniards, Frenchmen and other desirable immigrants out of South America.

TO KEEP HEALTHY, SEE DOCTOR REGULARLY

Old Age and Even Death Can Be Deferred if One, by Periodic Examinations, Checks Disease in Its Incipient Stage.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

IN a statement made by the Milbank Memorial Fund, New York, publicity was given to the remarks made by Sir Arthur Newsholme of London. Sir Arthur is a great authority on public health administration, and anything he has to say is worthy of everybody's attention.

I want you to read his statement regarding the increase in the average span of life. These are his words: "Years are already being added to the life of each member of the community, and every advance in curative and in preventive medicine implies an enhancement in the general standard of life. During the past seventy-five years not less than fifteen years have been added to the average duration of life in several countries. During the past twenty years the gain in length of life has been greater than in the previous fifty years. Already in the registration area of the United States—notwithstanding the vast number of avoidable deaths in childhood and in adult life, caused by diseases well within our control—the average expectation of life for every infant at birth is fifty-eight to fifty-nine years. A large part of this improvement is directly due to the increased care of health now becoming more general, both by personal effort and by the work of health authorities and of voluntary agencies."

Everybody wishes to live as long as he can. He has to be very sick indeed before he is willing to die. It will be good news then to hear that the expectation of life is being increased all the time. It is too bad that the marked improvement found in infancy and old age as regards increased chances of life is not found in the middle groups as well. Between the ages of twenty-five and sixty disease is almost as fatal today as it used to be. It is to this period of life that our efforts at improvement must be extended.

These are the years of high pressure for everybody. School days are over and the more leisurely life of old age has not yet begun. Business, profession, trade, no matter what the calling in life may be—it is a busy time.

I wish everybody would come to realize how necessary it is to have our foolish loss will be South America's gain.

SIR DANIEL HALL'S warning that the human race will soon lack food is discussed by many scientists everywhere needlessly. The amount of fruit and vegetables wasted in the United States is equal to the amount eaten.

Oceans, lakes and rivers could provide fish and meat, whales, sea cows, porpoises, etc., enough to support five times the present population of the globe, and fifty times that population, if fishing were done scientifically, with power boats, good fish protected, and destructive fish like sharks, scientifically eliminated.

THE earth's sixteen hundred million human beings weigh about 2,000,000 tons, allowing 150 pounds average, which is too much. The endless billions of tons of fertile soil on this earth, properly cultivated, to say nothing of the vast oceans, would feed a thousand times that population.

A SCOTCH farmer, putting away his sheep shearing tools, found in a hole in the wall a first edition of the poems of Robert Burns, published at Kilmarnock in 1786. If it is a good edition, the owner will get $8,000 for it. Burns got $100 for the book. Moralize on that, Burns doesn't care, now.

A NEW YORK beggar, in whose pockets the police found $12,325, also has $8,000 more in the bank, $20,385 altogether. The beggar is criticised unjustly. After all, a fortune of $20,000 is real beggary in these days. Invested at 5 per cent, it yields $1,000 a year, and what can you do with that?

THOSE who believe that public ownership of railroads and other natural monopolies cannot be made a success might read the report of the German States Railroad company, owned by the German people, and the biggest railway system in the world. It has 31,000 miles of railroad lines. The income for the year is more than six and one-half billion marks, and it makes money.

Rules For Marriage Will Be Taught In California, Prevent mismating

By International News Service. SAN DIEGO, Cal.—"Marriage, life's most important event, should not be left to caprice and chance. Mismatched couples are seldom happy, and are rarely successful in business."

With this declaration of principle, Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence Wilson of a fashionable San Diego church, started a class in marriage with an initial enrollment of 16 girls and 7 young men.

"The girls will lure shy young men into taking the course," the pastor explained. "We expect the class to number fifty within a short time. We shall try to keep the sexes fairly evenly divided."

Included in the curriculum of the "marriage school," will be such subject as: "Ten rules for a successful marriage."

"Modern enemies of the home," "The deepest basis of attraction," "The sanctity of the person," "Manly virtues," "Symptoms of true love," "Spiritual interpretation of sex."

"Heredity," "Differing religious beliefs," "Diseases which should bar marriage."

The Little Orphan

By Dorothy Flack

WITH the earnest and whole-hearted trust of a child the little orphan is waiting for the future and wondering what it will bring to her. Perhaps she feels that the prophecy, however gloomy, will come through the whispering of the birds. But through whatever medium, the fair orphan-child need have no fear. Although bereft of parents and the guidance of close friends, she has a heritage far more valuable with which to face life. She has first of all, a legacy of beauty so startling in its richness that it will help her conquer the world. She has the legacy of faith and simplicity which will endear her to everyone with whom she comes in contact. And what is perhaps most important, she has a love of the good and beautiful which will carry her into avenues of happiness and contentment. With these qualities she is so armored for the battle of life that no ugly shafts can pierce her. Hence, she is invincible!

HOLLYWOOD STYLE HINTS; HOW TO DRESS

By International News Service
LOS ANGELES.—Are you blonde, brunette, red-headed or composite?

Most women are of the composite type, according to Norma Shearer, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star and, for this reason, they should pay more attention to individuality of dress.

"Because her hair is not black as the raven's wing, nor the color of gold she is liable to pass unnoticed unless she chooses clothes that are distinctive.

"Color is the first thing that catches the eye. For this reason the composite, or nondescript type must choose colors that are startling. If your hair is not decidedly one color or the other, then play up your eyes. If they are blue wear this color in all the vivid shades and always be sure that there is a dash of black on the outfit to bring out the beauty of the original shade.

"If your eyes are green—instead of trying to make them appear less green, make them more so, because green eyes are fascinating. All of the marine colors are delightful. Nile green, aqua marine, love-bird green and mauve blend with green eyes and bring them out to best advantage."

Mountain Dew is a Thing of The Past, City Bootlegger In Auto Gets Trade

By HENRY LESENE

International News Service Staff Correspondent

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—Another picturesque figure is passing from the American scene.

Exit: Mr. Mountain Moonshiner. Enter: Good roads and automobiles.

It's not the Eighteenth Amendment that has wrought the change in the mountains of North Carolina dry officers admit; it's the march of progress.

The dry agents admit it's not the mountain moonshiner that's giving them the trouble; it's the town bootlegger with his high-powered motor car, they say.

For the heritage of the hillsman

—the eternal right of the mountaineer, as handed down from father to son for time immemorial—has been overcome, and the mountain folk are learning a new trade, or leaving their mountain haven.

Some of them are turning to the soil for a livelihood, it is declared, forsaking the cap and worm in the hidden hollow.

Cheap whiskey concocted by city bootleggers is underselling the "mountain dew," and the hillsman can't compete any longer with his more "efficient" brother, according to dry agents.

The blockader of the Carolina hills—in fiction what the Colonel and his "race horse" is to Kentucky

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: How should you word an introduction between a gentleman and your parents? QUEENIE.

QUEENIE: It is merely necessary to say "Mother, this is Mr. Green" and "Father, Mr. Green." Of course, you may vary this a little, but this "formula" is all that is necessary.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: Not long ago one of my friends went away. He gave me his address and told me to write him. This I did. The first letter I wrote was answered and, as I was interested in him, I answered immediately. This was three weeks ago.

Should I write him a note and ask him what it was in my letter that he didn't like, or if there was anything in it that displeased him, for he hasn't answered yet? HAZEL EYES.

HAZEL EYES: No, dear, don't write him again. He owes you a letter, and if he cares to continue the correspondence he will write to you. If you write him another letter it will appear to him that you are running after him.

Besides, most young men are very poor correspondents, and I shouldn't be a bit surprised if you did receive an answer to your letter when you've almost given up hope for it to arrive.

Florida Capital Still Inadequate

By International News Service
TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—The Florida state capitol, first completed in 1842, and remodelled in 1920 and 1922, again has become inadequate to house the various state departments, and contracts have been awarded for construction of a $300,000 building near the original capitol in which a number of departments will be given new quarters.

The new structure is scheduled to be completed by next April, when the legislature will meet. The state fish and game commission, shell fish commission, sanitary livestock board, hotel commission and other departments now are occupying committee rooms and offices of the legislature, which must be vacated before the next session.

The state road department, which is inadequately housed in a downtown office building, state geological department, now in the basement of the capitol, automobile registration department, now in a part of the comptroller's office, and some other departments also will be moved to the new building when it is completed.

The new building will be of limestone and brick on a reinforced concrete frame, containing a sub-basement and three floors above the ground, to have a total of seventy office rooms.

The state railroad commission has offices in the supreme court building, a handsome structure across the street from the old capitol.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The great golfing stars of the East and the West will meet here August 26, 27 and 28 in the annual tournament of the Western Golf Association. The scene of the conflict will be the links of the Highland Golf and Country Club, a course which has been pronounced fit by the officials of the Western Association after a tour of inspection.

MacDonald Smith, of New York, is the present champion and he will defend his title against a field of perhaps 300 players, including the Indiana professionals and the many amateurs who will play. Amateurs with a handicap of five or under are eligible to enter.

Much of the golfing strength of the Metropolitan district will be represented in play, including Walter Hagen, Joe Turnesa, Johnny Farrell, Gene Sarazen and Leo Diegel. Against this lot of talent, the West will send its best including Bill Mehlhorn, 1924 champion; All Watrous, Bobby Cruickshank, Jock Hutchison, Emmet French, John Black and many others. Bobby Jones, American open and amateur champion, and British open champion, is being sought as an entrant. The entry list, it is expected, will total 300.

The winning professional will receive $500. There will be ten money prizes. Entries will close on August 19.

Greeks Demanding National Election

By International News Service
ATHENS.—The demand for a national election is growing daily among the Greeks especially since the repeated failure of several politicians to form governments without parliamentary majorities but with the dictatorial support of President Pangalos. The present government seems inclined to order an election for fear that it would encourage army cliques to combine and possibly attempt a coup d'etat.

The President is understood to be willing to order the election if other means to obtain a government fail, but also will support certain changes in the national constitution.

President Pangalos addressed the following notice to the foreign correspondents in Greece:

"Now when probably a new government will be formed, it is our intention to restore the old constitution as soon as it is able to function smoothly. Orders given by me on January 4, 1920 will be rescinded. The people will be given a chance to decide about the political parties and persons who will govern in the future and also will have an opportunity to change the constitution.

"I am so convinced that the great majority of Greeks do not want new elections at present but only quiet and order but I also consider the wishes of the minority."

DON JUAN

Novel by
INIZ

Copyright, 1926, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"Don Juan," screen play by Bess Meredyth, starring John Barrymore, is a Warner Bros. pictorialization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's disillusioned father wants him to "become a man" or they will destroy you. "Take your own responsibility—your fate!" This advice has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time. In Rome he gaily risks the displeasure of infamous, all-powerful Lucrèce Borgia, who loves him, to protect Duke Varanese, whose death the Borgias seek so that Don Juan's kingdom can seize the Duke's lovely daughter, Adriana. Juan misunderstands Adriana's innocent gratitude and enters her bedroom. She threatens to kill herself unless he leaves.

For an instant he stood there, then, with a sudden, graceful gesture, such a gesture as a king might make in giving up a throne. Below Pedrolo waited with the horses. As Juan appeared he glanced up in amazement. His master's appointments usually lasted longer than the one had! Then, with an insinuating smile, he asked:

"Was she so entrancing?"

Juan's face might have been carved from stone. Only the eyes seemed alive, and in them the Pedrolo's words burned such murder as fury that Pedrolo stepped back in fear.

For a moment Juan glared at him. Then deliberately he struck his servant across the mouth with the back of his hand. Pedrolo gasped. Never had this happened before. Without a word Juan swung himself into the saddle and rode away.

He turned and strode to the door that opened on the balcony.

him. Then deliberately he struck his servant across the mouth with the back of his hand. Pedrolo gasped. Never had this happened before. Without a word Juan swung himself into the saddle and rode away.

Daylight was breaking; the narrow street glowed with the first rosy light of dawn. Don Juan had come riding home through many a dawn after a rendezvous with a lovely lady, but never had he come as he did now. Disillusionment had ridden with him; despair at the utter futility of life had saddened him, sent him home loathing all women.

But in this dawn a different sort of sadness held his heart. For he knew that at last he had found a girl who was unlike all the others he had ever known, one who proved that the teachings of his father had been false, that such a thing as a good woman did exist. And he feared that he had forfeited all chance of ever winning her love because of his complete misunderstanding of her.

Wretchedly he went back over the events of the last hour. He saw himself entering her room, standing there staring at her, appraising her loveliness as she sat half-dressed before her mirror. How she must have hated him in that moment! And then the way that he had taken her in his arms despite her struggles, the way he had taunted her with being afraid that Don Juan would find them there together, with having Don Juan for a lover and then inviting him, Juan, to come to her, the way he had kissed her—he groaned aloud, sick with disgust.

His mind went back, too, to the moment when he had laid her, unconscious, on the divan and to the thoughts that had rushed through his mind. Slowly, and through his cheeks flushed red with shame, it was a new sensation for Juan and not a particularly pleasant one.

And then that moment when he had lifted his eyes and found himself staring at the statue of the Virgin! How suddenly, then, as he had looked down at Adriana, had he realized the girl's purity and his love for her! He felt somehow as if he had been changed in that moment, made a new man again. Never again could he carelessly make love to any woman who chanced to please him for a moment. Adriana might never deign to look at him again, might hate him as he had hated all women, but henceforth his life would be dedicated to her.

And at that moment Lucrèce Borgia, picking up an exquisite goblet of Syrian glass, hurled it to the stone floor, where it splintered into a thousand pieces. There were other fragments scattered about, signs of the temper which had raged within her for the last few hours. Her little dog covered her hind a chair. Her maid had had died just outside the door of the bedroom, pale with fear, nursing a great bruise on her cheek, looking ruefully down at her arms, where long, angry scratches testified to the passage of Lucrèce's nails.

And over and over Lucrèce asked herself two questions:

"Why did he not come? And if he ever mean to come at all?"

Pedrolo was dropping with fatigue when home was reached at last, but to Juan any thought of rest was an impossibility. He wanted to spend the day where there might be some chance of seeing Adriana, not at home recuperating from the night before. The bath with Don Juan's men had had little effect on him than had the emotion aroused by Adriana, and that had been stimulating as well as exhausting.

Days of torture for Juan followed. Hopefully he went back over the events of that evening, cursing himself for a fool, considering the things he might have done, the many ways in which he might have handled the situation. If only he had known how different Adriana was from all other women! Why had he not known; why had he not seen at a glance the

According to county agent J. C. Ford, caterpillars have made their appearance in at least three places in this county in sufficient numbers to warrant the use of poison to exterminate them. One farmer, Mr. Jim Lynn was in town Friday, and secured enough poison to cover forty acres of cotton and will apply at once.

Also in the Falkville section the same condition exists and west of town in the Danville community there is also some infestation.

Mr. Ford is of the opinion that the situation warrants some energetic measures before a general infestation becomes a fact.

Arrangements have been made to get the necessary poison in such quantities as needed and it is believed that the farmers will use it freely.

Cotton in this county up to this time, while at least three weeks late, is very fine, and both sunshine and moisture have each come in liberal quantities.

In view of the fine corn crop in prospect in this county, and the further fact that many in this county and Lawrence, adjoining county have considerable quantities of old ear corn, there is quite a lot being offered for sale on this market, being offered at twenty-five cents the bushel, with few buyers. Lawrence county and west Morgan have each for a long time been sections where farmers planted large quantities of corn, and in these localities there is annually much corn sold.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE FIRST COMMISSIONERS DISTRICT OF MORGAN COUNTY:

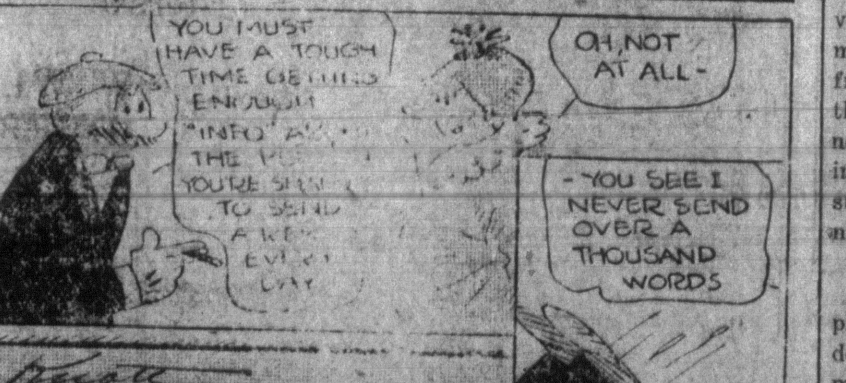

I wish to thank the people of the First Commissioners District of Morgan county for their support in my candidacy as a member of the Board of Revenue.

I shall ever remain grateful and appreciative for the interest which my friends manifested in my campaign and have nothing but the kindest feelings towards those whose support I could not command.

ALLEGED BURGLAR CAUGHT IN MISSISSIPPI

ATHEENS, Ala., Aug. 14.—Joe Wheeler Lawren, accused of breaking into the Rosenau Department Store here one night last week, has been located, a telegram being received by Chief of Police R. L. Thomas Friday to the effect that the youth was being held in jail at Quitman, Miss. The accused youth has waived extradition and officers have been sent to bring him back to the state.

Lawren was implicated by the boys now under arrest and in jail here. The attempted burglary was probably the largest that has ever been tried in Athens; the preliminary trial for the boys in jail is set for Monday before Judge J. E. Clem of the local inferior court.

"COME TO BRITAIN" PLEA TO AMERICAN TOURISTS

By International News Service LONDON.—A "Come to Brit- ain" movement has been launched here to attract American tourists who otherwise pass up the British Isles in favor of the Continent.

The backers of the movement, which includes the Association of British Chambers of Commerce and the American Chamber of Commerce in London, declare that many tourists avoid England, Wales, Scotland or Ireland because of the "erroneous idea" that Con- tinental countries, with their de- preciated currencies, are cheaper.

The plan is to prove to tourists that Britain is a cheaper country to tour, and that its facilities for health and enjoyment are unrival- led.

Barons Still Suffer From Vol Jinx; Ruth Cracks Out Another Home Run

The Barons may play pretty good baseball all over the circuit, smash the Chicks and Pels, devour Atlanta with further ceremony, pass up Chattanooga without even stopping to look around, but when they meet the Volunteers from Tennessee capital it simply is another story. The aBrons were born with two strikes on them when they crashed the gate at Nash- ville. The Vols concluded their games with the Barons on Sun- day, ending the season, and the Barons are proud that they do not have to face that motley crew of ball tossers again this year. Nash- ville did not roll up a big lead in the matter of games won and lost for they captured but 11 out of 21 games played, but a Vol series has loomed every time the Barons were in need of victories to near the Flying Pels or to keep in ahead of the Chicks.

Sunday's loss to the Vols cost the Barons second place, they dropped to the mat for the count and are now recovering from the thrust in third place. Meanwhile the Chicks moved up while the Pels were idle. That's the sad story told in the Southern League world today.

The Barons lost in one frame to the Vols when Emil Palmero failed in the fourth to stop the hitting antics of the Nashvillians. The Vols chased across five runs in that one frame.

The Lookouts bumped Crackers twice yesterday, 3-0 and 7-4. Memphis swamped Mobile 17-4.

Up in the American circuit the eyes of fandom were again turned toward the gigantic form of Babe Ruth while he was hitting his 30th home run of the year in the first game with Boston. The Babe scored three of the Yank runs in the first encounter and then came back in the second game to get three blows out of as many times at bat. The Babe is now standing 20 home runs back of his 1921 record and the baseball world is pulling for him to crack that record. How- ever, he has a long road to travel. Hurlers are not pitching to him freely and it is seldom that he gets more than one crack at the agats during an afternoon of play.

The Babe has been playing great baseball this year and has accounted for a number of Yank wins with his hectic clouting ability, the world is pulling for the Babe be- cause he has proved the backbone of a winning team that seems des- tined to carry the honors in the American league and possibly the honors in a world series.

Cleveland failed to inch up on the Yanks for the Tribesmen were bat- tling for an even break with St. Louis, losing the first 11-7 and then taking the last 6-4 in an ab- breviated contest that was won in the last half of the seventh frame.

A Senator rally brought Wash- ington a win over the Mackmen, 5-3. Stan Harris again calling out his hurling corps, Harris hurlers have not been going well this year at all, the youthful manager has had his hands full to stem the tide in every game. It is a seldom re- dict the Senators gain with only

Only Woman Who "Shot" Niagara Is Writing Book Of Experience

By International News Service SYRACUSE.—Mrs. Dennis Gal- lagher, whose fame was once that of "The Maid of Niagara Falls Rapids," the only woman ever to go through the rapids in a barrel and live to tell of it, is writing a book now, 25 years after the hair- raising episode.

Mrs. Gallagher was Miss Martha E. Wangenfuhr, a show girl when she made her famous barrel trip. The escapade started as a joke, the mature Mrs. Gallagher says today. Her chum, Maud Willard, who was playing at a Niagara Falls theatre with her, bemoaned life because her sister had married and Miss Wag- enfuhr's sister had died.

"Might as well go through the rapids in a barrel as to keep on liv- ing. Just the same thing," com- mented Miss Willard.

Mrs. Gallagher, whose memory of the incident is just as clear to- day as when she made the perilous trip, told of her troubles in trying to find a suitable barrel. She asked theatre owners to get her one, and failing finally had one made out of oak.

"Before I went into my barrel, there had been a parade. Presi- dent McKinley was at the Buffalo Exposition and there was a big crowd at Niagara Falls. The at- tempt had been heralded for weeks and it was a good publicity stunt for a show girl.

"I got into the barrel and just before they shut down the lid, word came of President McKinley's assassination. I wouldn't give up my attempt however, though the news of the assassination, of course, detracted from the public- ity which ordinary I would have received.

"Well I got through the rapids and was pulled out when one of the men on shore waded in with a rope around his body and grabbed the rope on my barrel. It was a terrible trip in that barrel, whirl- ing around and being smashed about. I wasn't worrying much though.

"I remember every time the bar- rel hit a rock, or while I was be- ing whirled around until I was dizzy. When they opened the bar- rel and I got fresh air I fainted.

"Maud made her attempt the next day. She wasn't as strong as I was. I tried to persuade her to give it up, but she thought I was jealous and went through. When they took her out of the barrel, atter it had gone around four times, she was dead. They said it was because the dog she had with her had used up the fresh air, but I know better, Maud wasn't able to stand it.

"We buried Miss Willard in Oak- wood Cemetery near Niagara Falls. In that same cemetery is Captain Matthew Webb, who tried to swim the rapids and lost his life."

Mrs. Gallagher, whose husband is Dennis Gallagher once a cham- pion wrestler, is writing the book about her experiences. She has lectured all over the world about the famous barrel trip and says now that she has just as much courage as she had 25 years ago. However, she says she wouldn't try it again, not at her age.

N. C. PEACHES ON WAY TO EASTERN MARKETS

By International News Service RALEIGH, N. C.—North Caro- lina's golden harvest of peaches is now moving slowly in carlot ship- ments to the Eastern markets.

Indications are that nearly 2,000 cars of fruit will be shipped from the Sandhills before the season draws to an end. The harvest now is in full swing.

Due to the fact that Georgia pro- duced the biggest peach crop in years this summer, the prices are being kept down, market men say.

Buy at home first, if the mer- chant hasn't what you want then ask him to order for you. The money will return to you, it is kept in circulation here at home.

NORMA'S ROLE IN "KIKI" FULL O' BEP

A whimsical, lovable spitfire—the personification of innocence one minute and a veritable wild- cat the next—is a fair description of Norma Talmadge in her latest First National starring vehicle, "Kiki," which opened 2-day en- gagement at the Princess Theatre today.

"Kiki" is Norma Talmadge at her best, yet the characterization is a radical departure from any- thing she has ever attempted. The star has the part of the Paris street gamine who uses her wits to get an engagement in a musical show, then gets fired the first night. Undaunted, she works on the sympathies of the theatre man- ager (Ronald Colman), manages to win an invitation to dinner and drinks too much champagne as a result of a plot by her rival (Ger- trude Astor). What transpires thereafter provides many laughs in "Kiki."

The screen version of the Belas- co stage play is produced by Jos- eph M. Schenck on a lavish scale. The plot is replete with mirthful situations. And Norma—heto- fore dignified, dazzling Norma—in her role of the little devil-may- care waif is a revelation.

The Best of Everything

"IT'S perfectly beautiful!" exclaimed the visitor, look- ing raptly out to sea. "But, oh, my dear, what do you do for provisions, stores, shopping? You are miles away!"

"We have the best of everything!" said her hostess with positiveness. "During the summer a great many yachts, and ships of the Atlantic fleet, find anchorage near the fishing village over there. So the little gen- eral store keeps a complete stock of all the best brands—absolutely everything!"

THE BEST BRANDS! It was not necessary to specify products. Any woman of intelligence and good taste who reads the advertisements knows that there is a best brand for every commodity used in the house- hold. And that brand is sufficient guarantee of ex- cellence.
